Re: E. Jhanek Szypulski

In my estimation, Mr. Szypulski is an exceptional candidate for selection to your summer internship program.

Department of English

My first introduction to Jhanek was when he enrolled in my Technical Writing course just over a year ago. His participation in that class had been nothing short of exemplary. As a student, he demonstrated all those characteristics which I feel make for an excellent writer: maturity, drive, curiosity, passion and diligence. His work for my class was consistently both creative and thorough in addition to demonstrating a very complete and strong set of communication and composition skills. And unlike the stereotypical introversion of some of his classmates (this course being primarily comprised of science and engineering students), Mr. Szypulski displayed both social affability and public speaking skills in group projects, peer reviews, and oral presentations which belie the personable and capable nature of a professional.

As an Instructor of English in the College of Letters and Sciences at Montana State University, I have had the privilege of meeting many hard-working and ambitious students. Mr. Szypulski has been one of these students and consistently excelled in all areas of his performance in my course. I also think Mr. Szypulski is at a point in his life where determination and integrity are understood as both personal and professional values not up for debate or equivocation, a perspective which seems increasingly on the decline. These are qualities any future employer should and, I trust, will be impressed with.

I believe that Mr. Szypulski will be a strong asset to your organization and am glad to recommend him. He has great potential and will do well in his field. If you would like additional information, feel free to contact me.

Sincerely,
